About Dr. Trevor Lane

Dr. Trevor Lane is Education Director and Senior Publishing Consultant at Edanz Group, an editorial and publication support company based in Japan. He has a broad background in the biomedical sciences, having graduated with an MA in Biochemistry and Chemical Pharmacology and a PhD in the molecular and cellular biology of cancer from the University of Oxford. After completing postdoctoral fellowships in clinical oncology and genetics in Hong Kong, he worked in journalism and publishing at various academic, research, and publishing institutions. He was the managing editor of several general and specialist medical journals in Asia and the senior editor of two social science journals in the United States. From 2005 to 2015, he headed a knowledge exchange unit at the Faculty of Dentistry, The University of Hong Kong, where he helped staff publish and publicize their research, and taught research communication and ethics to postgraduate students. Dr. Lane is a certificated English teacher, specializing in scientific communication and academic publishing. He is a member of the Royal Society of Biology, World Association of Medical Editors, Council of Science Editors, American Association for the Advancement of Science, Institute of Scientific and Technical Communicators, and International Association of Teachers of English as a Foreign Language. He is currently serving as a Council Member on the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE).

Upon completion of this Workshop, you will be able to:

- 1 improve your professional writing;
- 2 become an effective writer;
- 3 avoid common mistakes in logic and language; and
- 4 understand the structure of a good manuscript.
